

REAL ESTATE

The joy of moving in is contagious

New owners celebrate with the builders

David Cannell, Marsha Brown, of Marsha Brown Restaurant and Paul Beckwith, homeowner.

How often have you heard of a buyer throwing a party to thank the craftsman builders for the work they did to finish a new house?

When David Cannell and Paul Beckwith moved into their new home in the Canal Street townhouses in New Hope, they staged a party at Marsha Brown's restaurant and invited the builders.

The New York transplants, who have lived most recently in Ridgewood, N.J., were so pleased with their new digs — with a place to walk just outside their door and a whole county to explore — that they had to make it known.

They named their new home Bryn Teg, "beautiful hill," to reflect Dr. Cannell's Welsh heritage.

Scenes from the party are here. Peter Matherly of Addison-Wolfe Real Estate, New Hope, and Richard Pollack of Design Spree in Lawrenceville, N.J. could not attend. "We couldn't have done it without them," Beckwith said. He has yet to find a location for his collection of classic cars.

From George E. Michael Inc., developer of Canal Street Townhomes, Joanne Lutostansky, George E. Michael, Paul Michael and Brad Michael.